Dear Commissioner Henney:

As a member of the Center for Science in the Public Interest and a concerned consumer, I feel that irradiated foods need to carry a prominent label, in easy-to-read type, on the front of the package. Consumers need to be able to identify irradiated foods at the supermarket, and in restaurants so that they can decide whether they want to eat them or not.

I don't know if I am going to purchase irradiated foods at the supermarket, or eat them in restaurants, but I want to know which foods are irradiated and which aren't.

Very truly yours,

Susan Robin
